Stewpot: WHAT WE KNOW: Stewarding Adventist Education.
"Through the Unknown" By Becky St. Clair

Part 2: The conversation meandered on to other things, a day or two went by, and my grandfather's visit came to an end. As he was hugging us all goodbye and walking to the car, Grandpa handed my mom a small slip of paper. It turned out to be a check with a note in the memo line: "For the girls' school." It was the first of several regular checks that came for quite some time. Grandpa still isn't a professing Christian, but he heard in my parents' determination their simple faith and deeply rooted passion for something they believed in with their whole hearts. And he supported that. Many of you reading this probably feel similarly to my parents. You are working hard, as they did, to make sure your children receive an Adventist education. Whatever your reasons, it is important to you." Continued next week.
